PREFACE

I am a Homoeopathic physician myself. My vast experience of a quarter of a century as necessitated me to conclude and derive at a decision. There are great many difficulties in selection of a Homoeopathic remedy, specially in chronic cases, to find the simili, to equalise the potency, to work with miasmatic drugs, to know the constitution, is a great algebrical work, which ends in either successfully or unsuccessfully. Great authors differed in their opinions in selection.

It is a known fact that Dr. Schuessler was first started as an Allopath and changed himself to a Homoeopath, and after a long twenty years practice, thinking the science of Homoeopathy is a vast one without boundaries; he made a research, and a remarkable research, which was over-come world's greatest medical sciences and proved millions, practised it. Even today millions are satisfied by his greatest researches. So we want a substantial a base full, a natural science like Biochemistry. Every medicine of any system in the world must contain the property of these inorganic salts, even to an atom proportion. Most of the scientists have proved it. For instance, Aconite contains Ferrum in it. Without the property of Ferrum it will not cure the fever. Every drug must contain the important atomised quantity of this salts in it to give relief. It is immaterial whether it be Allopathy, Ayurvedic, Unani, Homoeopathy or any other system of medicine, without the property of these salts in it, it cannot work out on the cells of the body; it is otherwise known as similia of Biochemic properties. We can see that how these salts act on Homoeopathic principles. In case where a particular set of symptoms arise when a crude Natrum sulph is abused, the same Natrum sulph administered in potentised form relieves them. So, every one of the salts can be proved like this. In 1873 Dr. Schuessler had published in the 'General Homoeopathic Journal' (Allgemeine Home Zeitung.), Vol 86, page 91, the first treatise on his new healing system under the title "An abridged Homoeopathic Therapy". Doctor Carey, Boericke, Chapman, etc., also wrote that Biochemic salts are Homoeopathic medicines and vice-versa. So one can confidently practise medicine of Biochemistry with ease (based on pathology and clinical symptomatology) and sure cure can be attained. Don't you think when the electric waves of Ferrum are required to a certain patient it will be easiest method to directly introduce the potentised Ferrum instead of running to an unknown drug which properties we are not aware of though it contains Ferrum. ("Many healthy provers are relatively immune to remedies and do not develop the full symptomatology" XMcCarthy, W. Boericke, M.D.). 'Symptomatology and pathology' neither can be ruled out, and it is foolish for our school to divide on such a bone of contention. Every symptom has its pathological significance, but we can not always give it in words (E.B. Nash). It seems to me like folly to undertake to pose as either an exclusive pathologist or symptomatologist (E.B. Nash therapeutics, page 24). This was simple problem solved in this science which made millions of Biochemists throughout the universe.

Dear medical brotheren, I had an ambition to put before you some more important facts regarding these cell salts which are neglected by the founder and latter proved by other great doctors like Zondek, Hober, Oppenheimer, Stocklasa Freuhl, Gautier, Bourcet, Gley, Eric Graf, Von Der Goltz and Hermann Deters, etc. Any science, any invention may be small in the beginning. So also, Biochemistry now what is called as Cellular Therapy when first found was little. Now it has spread its branches far in wide, you will see it in the following pages adorned with the valuable researches of some eminent physicians of international fame. I make a special request to all of you to widen this cause of this work by adding your efforts.
